Restriction of Habits Reflection on Manliness of Players

(By Christy Mathewson, Star Pitche) of the New York Giants.)

Certain clubs within the last three or four seasons have attempted to re strict the habits of their players by in serting anti-booze and anti-cigarette the use of either liquor or cigarettes subject to a fine. It's an old theory of some managers that "lips" that touch liquor or cigarettes shall never moisten a spitball for me."

Now, it strikes me that such sweep ing restrictions are of little benefit elther to the club owners or the play-It smacks too much of the police system and acts as a sort of flaunting challenge to the players all season. Whenever they desire a smoke they have to sneak off and sift the smoke out from behind their hands the way I have observed some women doing in hotel dining rooms and cafes where they are not permitted to smoke when the head walter is looking. It is a cinch that these clauses do not pre-vent smoking or drinking, but they force the player to "sneak" a glass of beer or a smoke if he wants it.

Such clauses reflect on the intelli-gence and manliness of the ball play-ants. ers of today, to my mind, because there are few in the game at present who need any censorship of their hab-They are the same methods as for a lot of schoolboys and it is not taken for granted by the per-sons making these conditions that arm style, or rather underhanded and they apply to grown men playing ball for their living. The system of giv-ing the erratic player a bonus at the end of the season for good behavior is much more satisfactory, I think.
